

MEALS AS COLLECTIVE MEMORY

The food we eat and where we eat it are integral parts of cultural identity. Meals as Collective Memory, an oral history project powered by Weeksville Heritage Center (WHC) in partnership with NYC Commission On Human Rights, seeks to capture the memory-making utility of food and document both the social and culinary history behind Black-owned restaurants in Central Brooklyn.

A Brooklyn Guide of Black Owned Eats: CURATED BY STEPHANYE WATTS & OBDEN MONDESIR

PHOTOGRAPHY BY LAURENT CHEVALIER
LAYOUT DESIGN BY MARCO COUSINS

INDEX

ABOUT US	4
PROGRAM DATES	5
ABU'S BEAN PIE COMPANY	6
BESO.....	8
PIKLIS	9
BROOKLYN TEA.....	10
BROWN BUTTER	12
ITAL KITCHEN.....	14
CRABBY SHACK	16
DADDY GREENS.....	18
MA N' POP SOUL FOOD	20
MAP.....	22
SUYAS.....	24
CAFE RUE DIX	26
GREEDI KITCHEN	28
SISTA'S PLACE.....	30
ODE TO BABEL	32
GRANDCHAMPS	34
KAFE LOUVERTURE.....	35
JOLOFF.....	36
CHERYL'S GLOBAL SOUL.....	38
LAKOU	40
AFTERWORD	43

Meals As Collective Memory

The 1940s saw a rise in the migration of Blacks from the American South and Caribbean to Central Brooklyn, soon becoming a large part of the identity of those neighborhoods.

We are now living in a time when the pursuit of 'authentic' experiences and spaces has accelerated the process of gentrification. Through the collection of oral history interviews from long time Black restaurateurs and the owners of burgeoning neighborhood staples, and the sponsorship of supporting programming, WHC will show that authenticity is the cultural right to stay put.

Through Meals As Collective Memory, we will celebrate and explore Brooklyn's food culture from across the African diaspora. In addition, we will promote the kind of self-reliance that made historic Weeksville a model community by providing workshops to assist community members in starting or expanding their own food businesses.

We invite community members, food and culture enthusiasts, and local entrepreneurs to join us in learning about the history of the meals we consume and the restaurateurs behind them.

MaCM Programming

May 11:

Meals As Collective Memory Oral History Listening Party, 1:30 - 3pm
A Conversation on Food and Space, 3:30 - 5pm

May 15:

Entrepreneurial Workshop w: Black Owned Brooklyn, 7 - 9pm

May 22:

Minority/Women-Owned Business Workshop by New York City Commission of Human Rights and Small Business Services, 7 - 9pm

May 29:

Meals as Collective Memory Community Dinner featuring Cheryl Smith and Tonya Hopkins, 7 - 9pm

June 18:

Juneteenth Community Festival, 6-9pm

July 28:

Weeksville Summer Fete featuring Ardenia Brown and Klancy Miller, 2pm

Weeksville Heritage Center

Weeksville Heritage Center is a one-of-a-kind 21st-century cultural institution with a 180-year history. The organization's mission is to document, preserve and interpret the history of the 19th century African American community of Weeksville, Brooklyn—one of America's many free black communities—and to create and inspire innovative, contemporary uses of African American history through education, the arts, and civic engagement. Using a contemporary lens, Weeksville activates this unique history through the presentation of innovative, vanguard and experimental programs.

New York City Commission on Human Rights

The New York City Commission on Human Rights enforces the NYC Human Rights Law, one of the most protective in the country which covers many protected classes, including race, gender, religion, national origin, sexual orientation, and others in housing, employment, public accommodations and other jurisdictions. The Commission's Law Enforcement Bureau is a team of dedicated lawyers and human rights specialists who work to get justice for New Yorkers who have faced discrimination. The Commission's Community Relations Bureau provides education, outreach and support, as well as fosters dialogue among the diverse communities that call NYC home. Programming and the creation of this zine was generously funded by a grant provided by the NYC Department of Cultural Affairs and the NYC Commission on Human Rights.

...being here now, next spring will be 20 years. So, I had a kid came in here yesterday, I remember he was in his mother's womb. He's about 6'5" now. And that's one of the great things for having business for a long time. Your customers, you get to know them. So, it's I'm a part of the Muslim community here. A mainstay, and if you go through up, down the street here, I'm the only indigenous African American with a business on the block.

-Idris

And people will always be like, "I never eat Haitian food." But the moment they eat it, it's like, it grabs them, especially the rice. That you could eat the rice without having no meat or gravy on it because of the taste.

- Louisias

Because Bed-Stuy is amazing. It's just ... Bed-Stuy just resonates and we had the r
It just felt right to have it in the neighborhood that has so much historical context. Ha backdrop. And just the different people. Whether it's Caribbean or African or there's and tapestry of just human beings here. And it's such a location for creative. So a lot and musicians and film producers or makers or whatever come into this space. And hoped they would because we knew they existed there.

. BROOKLYN.
Tea

name Brooklyn Tea. is such a beautiful
such a great blend
t of creative artists
d we knew or we

- Jamilla McGill

Weeksville has a history of women in business as well. Dr. Susan McKinney Steward was the first Black woman doctor in New York State after graduating valedictorian from New York Medical College for Women She went on to run her own medical practice from 1870 - 1895.

I would say everyone's objective is money and financial security, but for me, it's satisfying to know that I'm giving you my best. I'm not just here for money, for money, but I want you to feel good giving me your money. Like, "You deserve it. I've gone to places to eat, and I just don't feel that. I don't feel that love, that as t's more which I'm here for it." Sometimes respect in the food.

- Michael

The greatest gift of life is friendship and brick by brick you have helped build this labor of love

- Melissa Gonzalez & Erika Munro
- Fred in Service Troop
- Sly & Stephanie
- Gerold & Tina Bell
- Diane & Natasha Casabier
- Jeani Weisak & Family
- Webster & M. Pietto
- Charles & Shantavia Dumas
- Joann & Holly Stein
- Chris & E. Gibb
- Helair & Jason
- Carlie Borden
- Calise & Brandon Babenzien
- Troy & M.
- Dennis & Sacha Kaneko
- Tiffany & Babon Peter
- Ejaz Kahn
- William & Melissa Clanton
- London

According to The 2018 State of Women-Owned Business Report, commissioned by American Express, companies owned by Black women grew by 164%, almost three times the rate of all women-owned businesses which grew 58%.

DADDY GREENS

DADDY GREENS

Pizza. It's affordable. Right? That goes without saying. The price of pizza, there's a study. I've forgotten when it came out, it was like in the '70s, the price of pizza is concurrent with the price of New York City subway fare. You go look it up. I'm sure you could find it. But it's concurrent with the New York City subway fare, right? So if you could afford to get on a train, you could afford a slice of pizza. And in New York City, everyone claims that their pizza's the best.

- Rodney

Ma' N POP
SOUL FOOD LLC

Weeksville's beginnings date to the early 1830s when several large landholders, started to break up their land and sell off parts of their property. Black investors purchased, divided, and resold some of these properties, advertising specifically to people of color in the newly emerging Black press and mainstream newspapers. These early land investors included businessmen like Henry C. Thompson, an African- American bootblack manufacturer and president of the African Woolman Benevolent Society and Sylvanus Smith, a hog driver who also owned property in downtown Brooklyn.

CLINTON HILL

Gates Av

12

18

4

1

3

16

7

10

Atlantic Ave

PROSPECT HEIGHTS

19

5

Nostrand Ave

New York Ave

BROO

6

11

Rogers Ave

17

CROWN HEIGHTS

MEALS AS COLLECTIVE MEMORY

BROOKLYN, NY

- 1. Abu's Bean Pie Company
1184 Fulton St
- 2. Beso
370 Lewis Ave
- 3. Brooklyn Tea
524 Nostrand Ave
- 4. Brown Butter
413 Tompkins Ave
- 5. Cafe Rue Dix
1451 Bedford Ave
- 6. Cheryl's Global Soul
236 Underhill Ave
- 7. The Crabby Shack
613 Franklin Ave
- 8. Daddy Greens
1552 Fulton St
- 9. Grandchamps
197 Patchen Ave
- 10. Greedi Vegan
1031 Bergen St
- 11. Ital Kitchen
1032 Union St
- 12. Joloff
1168 Bedford Ave
- 13. Kafe Louverture
392 Halsey St
- 14. Lakou
195 Utica Ave
- 15. Ma n' Pop Soul Food
349 Lewis Ave
- 16. Ode to Babel
772 Dean St
- 17. Piklis Cafe and Lounge
903 Franklin Ave
- 18. Sistas' Place
456 Nostrand Ave
- 19. Suyas
717 Franklin Ave

“It is encouraging to note that in many of the residential sections of the city of Brooklyn young colored men are trying to get into the business mart. Recently, one observes the Negro huckster with his horse and well-laden wagon appealing to you for your patronage, with fish, vegetables and fruit. In Fulton Street near Ralph Avenue, on Saturday evenings, the number of hucksters are about equally divided between the whites and the blacks. Last week, John Hicks, one of the Weeksville boys, started a route and succeeded in clearing out all of his stock in trade each day.”

New York Age, September 3, 1908

“Look at the ground we now stand on and on the section about one mile square known in the early days as Weeksville, after one of our race named James Weeks. Think of those people who occupied all those places when building lots have been bought for $25 and $50 and $100 each, and look upon the present occupants, Italians. Think of our city’s most famous caterers of forty or fifty years ago. They were the Downings, Mars, Watson, Vandyke, TenEyck, Day, Green and others, all colored. Their names were as familiar and as representative in high class work as are Delmonico and Sherry today. Who have succeeded to the business that these colored caterers had in those days?”

Samuel Scottron, July 13 1905, “Future of the Afro-American”

Want to be about that UJAAMA (cooperative economics) life? Be sure to follow Black Owned Brooklyn, created by Cynthia + Glenn Giwa on Instagram at @blackownedbrooklyn and bookmark their site, blackownedbrooklyn.com, for interviews on Brooklyn's diverse group of Black entrepreneurs.

The City of New York Minority and Women-Owned Business Enterprises (M/WBE) Program expands opportunities for minority and women entrepreneurs to access government contracts and grow their businesses. When eligible businesses are certified with the City they become more visible to prospective buyers, including City agencies and private contractors seeking to purchase goods and services.

Visit www.nyc.gov/sbs to learn more.

THE NEW YORK STATE ASSEMBLY PROCLAIMS
SISTAS' PLACE
Honorary
LANDMARK
In recognition of 20 years of expanding and deepening the appreciation of JAZZ
The Original African-American Art Form
June 8th, 2015

Looking for free resources to start, operate, or grow, your business? Head to the NYC Business Solutions Brooklyn Center at 9 Bond Street in Downtown Brooklyn.

We started to do the work and to sign the lease and it was history. We hadn't even fully decided that it would be a Haitian restaurant, yet, we just knew that we wanted to do something and we wanted to do something that would be good for this community.

- Sabrina

KAFE LOUVERTURE

Joloff

At one point in Weeksville's 100 year history, it boasted the highest rate of property and business ownership in any African American urban community.

So, I'm just saying, every culture has their soul food. It was just my way of not having to stick to just one type of soul food. Like I said, having food that feeds the soul makes you feel really grounded and good once you've eaten it.

- Cheryl

oothies, Crepes, Kava & Vibes

CONNECT WITH US    @LAKOU.CAFE

195

LAKOU

OPEN

So Lakou, the reason why I picked the name. Lakou means the court. Literal translation means the courtyard. Essentially the lakou is a shared, community space think in Brooklyn, the lakou, when it comes to community building or where people gather is probably closer to the stoop, where people hang out. So I kind of see this as our little stoop where people can get to know each other and we've been pretty successful at that, for sure. There's customers that come every day. The customer's don't just say hi to us, they say hi to each other now, which is cool.

- Cassandre

AFTERWORD

The 5th of July Resource Center for Self-Determination & Freedom housed at Weeksville Heritage Center is dedicated to the production & dissemination of knowledge concerning histories of post-emancipation, freedom, and its promise. Through Meals as Collective Memory, we tied 19th century Weeksville's historical themes of entrepreneurship and self-determination to look at the contemporary history of Black-owned restaurants in Central Brooklyn.

Black-owned restaurants represent a spatial history of inequality and the importance of cultural representation. They also reflect how restaurants are communal spaces that represent the symbolic annihilation that occurs in late capitalism to neighborhoods affected by gentrification which brings in citizens of higher tax brackets, but lacking in shared culture.

As the initial iteration of Meals as Collective Memory comes to a close, we have developed a living archive representing Black entrepreneurs based in Central Brooklyn in their own words. These oral histories collected throughout this project illustrate the necessity for creating these spaces, difficulties and growth experienced by the restaurant owners and chefs. Here, they share memories around food and express their dreams for a Brooklyn that reflects its people.

As lead on this project, I'd like to thank the New York City Commission on Human Rights for being incredible partners and seeing the urgency of Meals as Collective Memory in archiving the history of our borough. To Maya Meredith, your assistance in realizing this project and collecting oral histories was irreplaceable. Special thanks to the Weeksville staff for always being a huge support. For all of the restaurateurs who have shared their stories with us, this is a living testament to the community you served and helped create. Black Owned Brooklyn, Nikita Richardson, Ligaya Mishan, Tonya Hopkins, Chef Butta, and Klancy Miller, we cannot thank you enough for the richness and wealth of knowledge you brought to each event. Lastly, but certainly not least, thank you tenfold to the caterers that kept us fed throughout this project; Lakou Cafe, Pikliz, Island Pops, Cheryl's Global Soul, Bed-Stuy Fish Fry, and Ital Kitchen. Finally may this sentence be a portion of the encomium deserving of Stephanye Watts who as the outreach and programming consultant was integral to the success of this project.

Obden Mondesir
Oral History Manager,
Weeksville Heritage Center

Listen to Meals as Collective Memory oral histories at <http://5thofjuly.org>
Learn more about Weeksville Heritage Center at weeksvillesociety.org

WHC

Weeksville Heritage Center
158 Buffalo Avenue
Brooklyn, NY 11213
www.weeksvillesociety.org
info@weeksvillesociety.org

@weeksvilleheritagecenter

@weeksville

Weeksville Heritage Center

Commission on Human Rights

Department of Cultural Affairs